

IndComing.org > Daily > Editorials >

Did Pres. Trump Dream Up Line-of-Sight Hunter Lair at Airport to Give Excuse to Use Low Stairs to Prevent Biden Stumble?

by Sterling D. Allan, 228033; USC F B2-1 101A

cc: Pres. Trump

Oct. 20, 2025

I realize that Pres. Trump doesn't like being called out. I'm writing this with the objective of restoring dignity to him climbing and declining stairs. Presently, he acts somewhat paranoid. It's beneath him. Embarrassing.

His fear is justified. He made such a big deal about Pres. Biden's stumbles on the stairs. ~~The~~ Now he's got all eyes on him. "Is karma going to kick in?" #

The more careful he is, the more prone he becomes to stumbling.

The body is an amazing machine—able to do all kinds of amazing feats without a thought from us. We walk, run, skate, climb stairs, without giving a thought to all the muscle tasks involved in those actions.

This is a function of the subconscious mind, autonomic system. It is interrupted by ^{conscious} conscious thought. Have you ever stumbled entering a password by wondering what the password is—which the years prior you could do without giving it a thought? Auto pilot. #

His worry about stumbling is prone to create the very thing he's worried about. (Job ~~24:25~~ 3:25.)

What's the remedy?

How could you possibly forget something you've done zillions of times before?

We all know why he's careful. Is he going to fall?

②

He needs to apologize & publicly for how he made fun of Biden's stumbling. (He was wrong to do that about another human being, especially the President (albeit having wrongfully 'won')).

To derigrate someone like this is an ad-hominem fallacy. It's a well-known error of logic. It's a strategy that is not noble, ~~or~~ nor does it align with integrity.

He needs to repent of doing that (he does it a lot). It's beneath ~~him~~ his high calling as an exemplar for humanity.

Sterling D. Allan

IndComing.org

#Trump Stair Stumble