101 Move Synchronicity

(To appreciate this, see my 5/6/23 blog post 2 "101: 'Can Do' vs. 'I'll Never Be Able To' Attitude.")

After
When I was moved to section 1 last week, I had "101" ^{three times} show up on my glucometer[^] in four days, starting on the first evening after I had about a 3-hour chat with my friend Samuel Shaffer, whose mother has been doing my website. He's in bed 101 B. I enjoyed that synchronicity

Then, this morning early, (~4:30 am) it occurred to me that the bed/neighbor^{spot}[^] next to him (101 A) would be great for me; (a) being close to Sam; (b) having a clear view of the section door to not miss pill line (insulin) or lay-in trays (chow)^{with me}[^], being hard of hearing so as to not always catch the verbal calls for these; (c) to remember that my calling is on public display (like a reality ^{show} ^{saw}), being in view of all who are out in the corridor, looking through the section plexiglass windows that line the front; and (d) to have the "101" number [^].

In the morning, I asked Sam what the chances are that his ~~her~~ neighbor might want to switch with me. He said I could ask him. Synchronistically, that afternoon, when his neighbor ^{from work,} (101 B) got in[^], he and my neighbor came up to me, independently, asking if I'd be willing to ^{with 101 A} switch[^]. I see God's hand in that synchronicity. The officer(s?) approved it.

With God, nothing is "impossible" (G101).

Correction: I misread my notes when composing this. The 101 A move ~~was put in for the move to 101 on 10/21.~~ described here occurred on 10/22.
