

The Chosen: Jesus Healing as Disciples

Have Introspective Confrontation

To: Epoch Times Articles

By: Darrell Jenkins

by Sterling D. Allan, 228033

Aug. 28, 2022

I am super impressed with what a <sup>Fantastic</sup> excellent job "The Chosen" series is doing in filling in the back story of the Gospels' account of Jesus' life. The acting is superb—very relatable and real. All involved are using their God-given gifts to excellence: the script-writers, the directors, the musicians, the scenery developers, the costume designers, the historians, the lighting, the producers. It's my favorite show series, ever, by far. (the)

The episode BITU TV aired today depicted the disciples' interactions as Jesus was healing people in a line from Samaria. It culminated in their introspective musings around the <sup>while waiting for Jesus to return,</sup> campfire, sharing their struggles learning and living the Jewish ways under the Roman occupation, awaiting Messianic deliverance, now unfolding. <sup>(then, and now)</sup>

Jesus' mother shared a little of what it was like when Jesus was born—how he needed her, had the birth blood and crud

↑ on him, needed to be cleaned.

Various of them used on times they violated the Jewish law, such as sneaking a bite of bacon and the guilt that followed.

Mary Magdalene full of being orphaned, Fed up with the Jewish culture, leaving when she was young, falling into all kinds of errors.

<stet>

Then Peter laid into Matthew. How could he betray his own people, working for the Romans <sup>as a tax collector (e.g. IRS)</sup> to make their life harder?

Though they took issue with Peter's lack of tact with Matthew, other disciples also wanted to get an answer from Matthew, standing up in disgust.

Then Jesus came walking back from a full day of doing healings, beat. Surely he could sense the unsavory dialogue that had just been occurring, disappointing him at the end of such a taxing day for him. One day, his disciples would also be doing healings ~~as well~~, but they were very far from that at present.

Jesus' mother <sup>helped him</sup> tenderly retire for the night, washing his feet, Jesus moaning in exhaustion, as the disciples quietly, ashamedly, watched on, introspective.

No wonder The Chosen has been such an ecumenical hit, beloved by millions, financing the continued roll-out of new episodes, for seven seasons, eventually. Each episode is a masterpiece.

This is now my third time through the first two seasons as we wait for the next season on KBYU TV. I love how it's giving me essentially a <sup>deeply</sup> personal relationship with Jesus and his disciples, getting to know and relate <sup>all of</sup> to them as if I'm there among them, as one of them. It brings into reality John 17:22 "that they [disciples, then and now] may be one, even as we are one."

Sterling D. Allan

ItHadComing.com

#TheChosenIntrospectiveConfrontation

